

PEOPLE AND CARNIVORES

We reconnect and restore carnivore populations in the Northern Rockies by working with the region's people to prevent human-carnivore conflicts

Where We Work

Our Projects

Our Projects

2019 Grizzly Fencing Workshop

- Demonstration of permanent and temporary electric fences
- Classroom presentations by experts
- Peer-to-peer discussions
- Practitioners, wildlife managers, and landowners

Martens Family Farm

Context and Conflict

- Small family goat/poultry farm
- Adjacent to Idaho Wilderness
- Increased bear, wolf, and cougar activity
- Mountain lion depredation on goats

Our Solution

- Livestock guardian dogs
- Portable electric mesh
- Bear resistant trash bins
- Partnership and multi-year involvement

Lower Crossing Farm

Context

- Multi-species farm with poultry
- Important grizzly corridor
- High potential for conflict

Our Solution

- Mobile electrified chicken “tractors”
- Carnivore activity monitoring
- Risk assessment and advising

Looking Ahead

- Building momentum: the beginnings of cultural change
- A crucial moment for connectivity in our region
- Challenges and opportunities of a crowded landscape
- Coexistence is important work
